UMS considers lifting sanctions against S.Africa

by Janet Scouten, staff writer

The Finance Committee of the University of Maryland System (UMS) Board of Regents recently considered a proposal to rescind the UMS Policy on Investment of Endowment Funds in Companies Doing Business with South Africa.

During their March 25 meeting, the Regents determined that, in order to receive more student input on the matter, no decision would be made about the policy until their next meeting in late May.

The investment policy, adopted in June 1990, states: "1. Investment of endowment funds of the University of Maryland System in the stock of companies that have business activities in South Africa is prohibited, and 2. Stock obtained by the University System through gift, if deemed to represent a company with business activities in South Africa, will community."

On September 24, 1993, Nelson Mandela, president of the African National Congress and a candidate for the presidency of South Africa, told the United Nations that be divested within sixty days following title acquisition."

According to the UMS, "this policy was enacted, at least in part, due to the strong support for it from the student been determined, agreed and set."

In light of these developments, the UMS Council of Students requested that the Board of Regents reconsider the appropriateness of their investment policy.

Craig Heilman, SSU student representative to the Council of Students said, "South Africa is in the midst of political reform. Under Nelson Mandela, South Africa is making steps to remove apartheid, therefore it would be prudent to lift the sanctions."

President of the SSU Union of African-American Students (UAS) Lisa Smith said, "I think that since South Africa is trying to become one nation under one leader, we should try to support them in any way that we can. Economically seems to be the way that they need our help, so we should lift the sanctions."

The Finance Committee of the UMS said that lifting the sanctions may also have fiscal impact on the University System.

"Since rescission of the policy removes restrictions on University System investments, improved financial performance may result."

In addition, UMS Chancellor Donald Langenberg made a recommendation to the Finance Committee that the investment policy should be rescinded.

Students are encouraged to provide input to the Finance Committee about this issue. Call (301) 445-2739.

US Bike Trek proceeds go to Lung Association

by College Press Service

If you like the idea of whizzing down a Rocky Mountain road while raising money for a good cause, the U.S. Bike Trek 1994 may be just the summer getaway for you.

Organizers of the coast-to-coast informational ride are looking for bicyclists who ago with fellow Rutgers students.

By traveling slowly-- 3,514 miles in 54 days-- bikers get a chance to meet and talk with fellow citizens, particularly about the importance of living smoke-free, drug-free lives. "The slower you go, the more you realize what a great country it really is," Hitman said.

The idea is for each participant to raise a minimum of $3,000 by getting local community businesses or individuals to sponsor the rider on a per-mile basis. Along the way, bicyclists stop at schools

Last year, 16 riders raised about $50,000, some of which went to the American Lung Association and some to a Bike Trek fund. Proceeds from the Bike Trek fund will be used to give communities small seed grants for various community service projects.

Bicyclists don't have to sign on for the entire tour, Hitman says. Shorter rides along the route also are possible.

For more information, call Hitman at (609) 561-2304 or write U.S. Bike Trek 1994, 29 Emmons Dr., P.O. Box 2006, Princeton, N.J., 08543-2006.

"It's certainly the adventure of a lifetime," said Sam Hitman, a Rutgers University graduate who helped organize the annual event several years

The trek starts May 18 when cyclists dip the front wheels of their bikes into the Pacific Ocean and travel across the northern United States, hitting such spots as Missoula, Mont., Mount Rushmore in South Dakota, Minneapolis, and Niagara Falls, N.Y. It will end with a dip in the Atlantic Ocean at Portland, Maine.

Peace Corps promotes world peace & friendship

by Garrett McGlothlin, staff writer

The Peace Corps is an organization most students have heard about or considered joining. But the details are fuzzy to most.

Currently, there are more than 6,000 volunteers working for the Peace Corps. They are the second largest employer in America of recent college graduates.

The Peace Corps requires a two year commitment to overseas service in a developing country. Applicants must be over 18.

According to information from the U.S. Peace Corps Washington Recruitment Office, "The projects are grassroots self help development projects in more than 90 nations in Africa, Latin America, Asia, Central Europe and the Pacific."

Former Peace Corps volunteer and American Foreign Ambassador, Charles Baquet said of the mission of the Peace Corps:

"Volunteers promote world peace and friendship; help developing countries to meet their needs for skilled men and women; and promote mutual understanding between people of the United States and those developing nations."

The Peace Corps has stayed true to its mission since

"There is no doubt in my mind that the Peace Corps was a great education for me."

*-Charles Baquet,
American Foreign Ambassador*

it was established in 1961 by President Kennedy, according to Baquet.

Baquet said, "There is no doubt in my mind that the Peace Corps was a great education for me."

The Peace Corps is attractive to students because it is a chance to travel, spend time thinking about what they would like to do in the future, help other people.

The recruitment literature bills the Peace Corps as a way to "gain impressive credentials" for future employment.

Peace Corps volunteers are also paid for their service. They receive a monthly living allowance as well as $200 a

Charles Long, was involved with the Peace Corps in its early years.

Living situations vary between urban and rural some end up with modern sanitation others are not so lucky.

He spent the years of 1963 through 1965 in El Salvador setting up home gardens and teaching agricultural skills to and directing summer camps for local children.

"It was an experience I couldn't have gotten anywhere else," said Long. He said that it was in El Salvador that he discovered that he wanted to teach elementary school.

The Peace Corps is referred to as the toughest job you'll ever love. First of all its not exactly easy to get accepted into the Peace Corps.

Long said that it has changed since he served. "Its more professional now, more focused."

meet those challenges.

"Most in demand are people with degrees or experience in: teaching especially math, science and English, agriculture, business, environment and health care. Language skills are helpful in qualifying as well."

Selection from among liberal arts graduates is highly competitive, and the recruiters recommend that that liberal arts students should inquire early about ways to enhance their qualifications.

Talking about progress in the developing countries, Long said that once in the country that the volunteers begin to take more of the perspective of the native people.

So instead of turning the developing third world nations into America overnight, they take small steps instead of great leaps.

Dorm life provides single moms opportunities

by Sharon Cook (CPS).

BEVERLY, Mass.-- When Samantha Lightizer wakes up in her Endicott College dorm, she has an hour to get dressed, have breakfast and watch a little TV before heading up the hill. En route, she uses her time well: she dozes, thumb in mouth. She is, after all, only one year old.

The daughter of 18 year old Shelli Brown, Samantha, is one of the 10 children whose moms are enrolled in the new Single Parent Program at the four-year private college.

The nine mothers and their children live in an older residence hall that has been set aside specifically for them. Moms and kids share rooms, bathrooms and a kitchen, although many of them also eat at the school cafeteria, where high chairs are conveniently line against one wall.

Endicott provides all that a traditional student would expect, plus day care at the child-care center on the campus and housing for both mother and child. The total cost of the program, which started in September, is about $18,500 a year for participants, with mothers receiving financial assistance from a number of different sources.

To the student moms, the program means different things, but mostly it means peace of mind. Housing is the biggest single expense of a single parent, and many of the mothers who are now enrolled in the program say the family dormitory has given them a chance to follow their dreams while providing for their families.

pre-nursing student who lives in Bullock Hall with Jessica, her 2 year old daughter, the meal plan has been a real boon to her. "I don't have a car," she says, "and I don't like to cook."

She studies for a chemistry exam in her sunny room while her daughter sleeps in the next room. "The most difficult thing is the community living," she says. "Most of us have come from our own apartments. The initial adjustment was hard, to go from a five-room apartment to two rooms."

"But," she admits, "it's nice to be with people who are in the same boat. When you've had a tough day, there's always someone to talk to, don't think about. Cunningham says it's difficult studying and sharing space with a 2 year old. "I can't study when she's awake. I usually start after she's asleep, around 9 pm," she said.

Patti Tierney, 34, is the oldest single mother. The program has been a big adjustment, one that continues to cause her difficulty.

"My daughter Jennifer is 11. She's the oldest child. I'm the oldest adult," Tierney said. "She's caught in the middle: no kids her own age. She doesn't know where to fit in. She doesn't know who to follow."

Tall and poised, Jen acts and looks older than 11 years. (continued on page 3)

A sixth-grader at Beverly's Briscoe Middle School, she often helps the mothers supervise the babies.

"Maybe I'm too set in my ways," Tierney says, "but I definitely can't get used to sharing a bathroom and dormitory living." Then she says, "But I'll admit I have it easier. Most mothers can't leave their rooms-- and their babies. Jen's older; I can step out when things get noisy here."

Jessica Benson, 21, a communications major, is taking six courses this semester so she has to study whenever her 4 year old daughter Leanne is at the child-care center.

"I'm really happy with this program," she says. "Any woman, coming out of a bad relationship would think this is great. They've got great security here."

"I'd almost given up on college until I heard about this program. There wasn't any place for me to go. I was working full time, making just enough money to pay the rent. I'd gotten off welfare and I could only take one class at night. I loved school. I was having a hard time and was really depressed about it. I had to work but I wanted to be in school. I knew I should be in school."

"When you're a single mother, the hardest part is housing. I applied for Section 8 housing. I've been on the list for two years. You can get it quicker but you have to spend some time in a shelter. At one point I was enrolled in Salem State College but I couldn't concentrate, worrying about the rent. This program took away the problem of where we would live."

Yenitza Vasquez, 19, is the mother of two children. She is enrolled in the pre-nursing program. "It's hard," she says in her soft voice. She was involved with the Teen Parent Program at Salem High School when she was a sophomore, following the birth of her son. She never left school but took six weeks off while a tutor visited her daily. Vasquez was on the honor roll in high school.

"I got good grades," she says, "but they were better when I had no kids."

Following high school she enrolled in the Lawrence Technical School in the Allied Health program, preparing to be a nurse's aid. It was while visiting nursing homes and hospitals with her class that she realized she wanted to be a registered nurse. "Once you become a nurse, you can work anywhere: the Army, as a visiting nurse, in schools," Vasquez said. "Someone needs your help and you are able to help them."

Not having to worry about housing for themselves-- and their children, is one of the most desirable aspect of the Single Program.

"We've moved so much," says Jessica Benson, another student. "There's been so much transition in my daughter's life. She loved this place from day one."

NEVER AGAIN: Holocaust Remembrance Week

All my life I have been told many stories and have been taught many truths about the Holocaust—constantly reminded of the deaths of members of my faith and members of my family. The more I heard and studied, the more frustrated and angry I became. So many conflicting messages are revealed when one tries to understand how the world stood by while millions were exterminated. Why did this happen? Why us?

Emil Fackenheim, a Jewish philosopher and theologian, has spoken of the commanding voices of Auschwitz: The Jew must not lose her or his faith—lest Hitler be granted a victory in his grave. The Jew must not give up hope and remove her or himself from the world—lest Hitler be granted a victory in his grave. The Jew must proclaim her or himself a Jew—lest Hitler be granted a victory in his grave. Finally, the Jew must not let those who died, die in vain. We must never forget—lest Hitler be granted a victory in his grave.

This sounds so evident, yet one must realize that these commandments are in conflict with each other. How can we never forget those who died, yet have faith in a G-d who seemingly stood idly by while G-d's people died? We must create a new and revolutionary relationship with Judaism. Sounds easy, right? Wrong!

As a Jew, I can only address the Holocaust in relationship to my own struggle, but I do not want us to forget the millions of others who also died needlessly under the Nazi regime. A reconciliation between the Holocaust and Judaism, or any Religion seems almost impossible, yet that is what we must do.

There are those who still try to forget. There are those who deny the existence of this evil. But to forget such an evil is to grant Hitler a victory in his grave. This we cannot allow. That is what Remembrance week is all about. It is a memorial to those who suffered, those who died, and those who survived. Reminding ourselves often of the atrocities of genocide and the traditions of hatred that led to them, we must never forget. Various books (such as Elie Wiesel's Night), movies (like Schindler's List) and the National Holocaust Memorial in Washington D.C. help to keep this memory alive.

NEVER AGAIN.

Letters to the Editor

Response to "Fly on the Wall"

This is directed to J. Thomas' letter to the editor. Do you know how ignorant you are? It seemed to me that the author of "Fly on the Wall" was simply making an observation about two conversations he happened to overhear. Yet you use words like "conspiracy" and "oppression." What conspiracy? What are you talking about?

I'm having trouble understanding your letter. You call this person "unbiased" and then turn around and say he is a racist. You never say why he is a racist or say anything that makes any sense. I don't even know what your point was!

Marianne Peck

Another Response to "Fly on the Wall"

This letter is in regards to J. Thomas's ignorant response to "Fly on the Wall." If you actually read the same article that I did, you should recall that there was no mention as to the gender or race of the individual who wrote the initial letter, so how can you assume that the individual was African-American? Your letter just proved to me something I already believed. There are too many ignorant people on this campus. That letter could just as easily have been written by a white, Hispanic, or Asian student on campus. It was not saying that all white students are racist or that all African-American students are racist. It was simply stating that there are people that still exist that are racially naive and that this naivete needs to stop. We all came from one mother, our blood is the same color, and our bodies basically function the same way, so why is there this great inability to treat each other as sisters and brothers instead of always calling names??

Joy Ashcraft

Clarifying what UAS is

Since its establishment several years ago, the Union of African-American Students, otherwise known as the UAS has been the subject of much speculation. Many people have been and still are ignorant to the purpose of the UAS. Many people assume that the bimonthly meetings are anti-white or promoting racist ideals. Some people even think that the UAS doesn't allow non-black students to attend its functions. Still others go as far as to assume that the members of the UAS are a bunch of hateful people seeking to avenge former wrongs by plotting against whites.

Well, for all of you that have feelings such as those stated, or have some other question, complaint, comment or concern about the UAS, I think it's about time for you to free your minds of all speculation. It's time for you to seek for and to find the truth about the Union of African-American Students. That is, if you want to know the truth.

On Thursday, April 28, at 7:00 pm in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center, there will be a forum entitled "Union of African-American Students: It's a Black Thing. But, Do You Understand?" Sponsored by the Union of African-American Students and Peer Educators for Diversity Awareness, this forum was planned to help sort out all of the myths surrounding the UAS and to find out the truth. Everyone is cordially invited and welcome to attend. Let your voice be heard.

Salisbury is not a fun place to live

Salisbury and the lower Eastern Shore is not the Gilligan's Island get away paradise that some people might insist it is. In fact, I can think of a few reasons why Salisbury is probably one of the worst places a college student can live.

The first is the night life that this town has to offer. There is little to do besides drink and socialize (unless of course you like duck watching). Politicians and police officers in this town can have loud and out of control parties. A few students, a keg, and a soundproof apartment, on the other hand, are grounds for arrest and prosecution.

In addition, there is the bar scene. Favorite student hangouts such as Rosco's and the Circle Bar are a thing of the past. Most current bars either cater to locals or charge ridiculous prices for admission and drinks. Why should I pay a cover just to drink in a sweaty, overcrowded pig pen?

Then there is the way this part of the country smells. I do not think the Governor was kidding when he made the infamous "outhouse" comment. About this time of the year, the air really starts getting thick with the smell of chicken carcasses and cow manure. Its odors like this that make me want to throw up.

Then there is the fact that this part of the country is a cancer factory. Delaware and Maryland are ranked first and second in per capita cancer deaths. The largest concentration of cancer is found on the lower shore. Why smoke three packs a day and eat a high fat diet when you can get the carcinogenic growth of your choice, free of cost, just by living here?

The last and perhaps most significant reason why Salisbury is probably not a very good place for college students is because of job opportunities--- or lack thereof. You work four long years to get your diploma and what have you got to show for it? A $6.50 per hour job plucking chickens?

Greenpiece: Don't give it to the poor

Isn't it ironic that the industrial nations with the most stringent environmental regulations export the largest quantities of hazardous wastes to third world nations?

Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United States export about two million tons of toxic waste each year. Some of the waste includes old paints, solvents, oils, contaminated soils, expired or outlawed pesticides, tires, batteries, radioactive waste and ash, slag and filter dust from metal industries.

Southwire Corporation of Georgia and Gaston Copper recycling of South Carolina didn't want to pay three hundred dollars a pound to dispose 1,000 pounds of toxic filter dust from their smelting operations.

Stoller Chemical company bought the toxic dust contaminated with lead and cadmium for fifty dollars a ton, mixed it with sulfuric acid. They then sold 3,150 tons of the hazardous mixture to Bangladesh as a fertilizer.

Since the scheme has been revealed, Stoller is out of business, Southwire and Gaston have been fined one million dollars, and the "fertilizer" is still on the shelves of local Bangladesh markets.

Certain mercury recycling products are so toxic that they are illegal to dispose of in the United States. South Africa's Thor Chemical industry is one of the largest recycler of mercury waste in the world. Almost a third of Thor's employees have suffered from severe health problems or died from mercury poisoning. The African National Congress inspected the plant and discovered over 10,000 barrels of illegal mercury wastes imported from United States companies.

Some toxic schemes have been revealed before they have been carried through. Greenpeace intervened with plans to ship millions of tires from the west coast of the United States to be incinerated on the island of Tonga in the South Pacific.

Plans to ship 8,000 tons of petroleum contaminated soil from Hawaii to the Marshall Islands to build an artificial reef and plans to ship large quantities of toxic ash from a Philadelphia incinerator to Panama to build an ocean causeway were both dissolved by Greenpeace.

If you would like to write your representative of Congress to tell how you feel about these hazardous waste maneuvers, please write: Hon. Senator Gilchrist, U.S. Senate, Washington D.C., 20510.

Amy Black stars in one woman play

by Ali Moyer, staff writer

This month Amy Black, an SSU senior, will perform the self-directed, one woman play "Talking With."

In this play, Black, a veteran actress, portrays four women and each of their unusual lifestyles.

"[The women] are crazy and bizarre in their own way," said Black. One character believes that a McDonald's Big Mac is the answer to any problem.

Although each character is portrayed in separate scenes, it still requires a large amount of concentration in order for Black to become each character.

The play was written by Jane Martin. "Actually Jane Martin does not exist," said Black. The play is a collaboration by several playwrights in Kentucky.

Originally there were over 10 actual characters in the play, however for this production Black chose her four favorites to portray.

Black explained that this is the first semester in which an SSU student has been allowed to direct her own play.

Black said that she finds directing the play herself to be difficult. "I'm very easy on myself," she said. "I like to work with other people."

Black started acting at the age of six when she became involved in a community production in her hometown Rockville, Md.

While attending SSU she has performed in 11 productions. "My favorite was 'the Miracle Worker' last fall," she said.

After graduating in May, Black plans to pursue her Masters Degree.

Her production, "Talking With" will run April 15 and 16 at 8pm, and April 18 at 2 pm in the Fulton Hall theater.

Admission is free.

The SSU Faculty Cultural Events Committee will sponsor a jazz concert on Sunday April 17 at 2 pm.

The Robert Larson Trio will perform in the jazz tradition of Bill Evans, Keith Jarrett and Tommy Flanagan, with modern influences such as Monty Alexander, Benny Green, Chick Corea and Herbie Hancock.

The group will perform original pieces, as well as some compositions by Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk, Evans and others.

Robert Larson, who plays the piano for the group, regularly appears with other jazz musicians from the Washington, D.C. area. He also performs as a solo pianist.

Larson is the director of Jazz Studies at Shenandoah University in Winchester, Va.

He also directs the Jazz Ensemble, which is comprised of students in the Department of Jazz Studies. Under his directorship, the Ensemble has performed in Sweden, Japan and mainland China, as well as at various festivals and conventions in the mid-Atlantic region.

Glenn Harris plays string bass and bass guitar. He lives in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, D.C., where he works as a free-lance musician, appearing throughout the mid-Atlantic region, including the Eastern Shore.

He has worked in a variety of styles and musical settings, including the concert stage, jazz clubs and cabaret shows.

Harris currently works for NASA at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

The drummer of the trio is musician Stan McMullen. He has worked as a free-lance musician since relocating to the D.C. area in 1984. McMullen has performed in both live and session playing environments.

He is also a member of the Mark Brandt Group whose first CD is planned for release this year.

McMullen is not only a musician, he also works for IBM company.

Larson explained that, ironically, jazz is more popular in other countries in spite of its U.S. roots. He also said that jazz never disappears, even though it is not very popular in the mainstream.

Larson said that he hopes jazz will gain more popularity. He said that performing concerts on college campuses enables the musicians to expose both the campuses and the communities to jazz.

The Larson Trio concert will be free and open to the public in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. There will also be a reception directly following the concert in the Guerrieri Center lounge.

Phone Survey: Welcome to Paradise

by Janet Scouten, staff call girl

Welcome to the SSU Flyer Phone Survey. This is a brand spankin' new column for your reading pleasure. This week's topic is in response to the thousands of letters the Flyer receives daily concerning the alleged dullness of Salisbury.

To help all of you bored people out there figure out some ways to have fun, I've compiled a handy little list of things I consider to be very entertaining.

In addition, I called a whole slew of people and asked them the question of the week.

Well, here's my little list:

- Go roller skating.
- Play with the ponies on Assateague Island.
- Boogie-oogie woogie 'til you just can't boogie no more.
- Go to the library and read old issues of magazines from the 1950's and 60's.
- Rent a canoe and spend some time on the water.
- Find a friend with a car and go on a road trip.
- Go to the white brick record store and purchase your own Menudo album.
- Watch "Three's Company" every day for four months to see if the basic plot ever changes.
- Volunteer your time to an organization you think is - important.

- Read a book.
- Eat too much ice cream.
- Go to the laundry room and wear some stranger's underwear on your head.

- Play miniature golf.
- Drive the go-carts in Ocean City.
- Go on a picnic.
- Feed the ducks at the city park.

- Go to the zoo.
- See a movie at the cheap theater.
- Go bowling.
- Spend the night at Super Giant (it's open 24 hours).
- Take photos of Salisbury's quirky land marks (Hitch's Insurance Drive-In, Delmarva's Window Tinting & Used Books, Meatland, Frank Perdue).
- Go on a bike ride.
- Play Ms. Pacman (they have it at the bowling alley).
- Read the Flyer.
- Play strip poker.
- Write a letter to your mom.
- Draw a picture of your strangest looking professor.

- Blow bubbles.
- Eat a tube of Pillsbury cookie dough.
- Read the Flyer again.
- Play kickball.
- Go streaking.
- Swim at the Maggs pool.
- Learn to surf.
- Climb a tree.
- Write to the editor and complain about your dull life.
- Memorize all the lines from the Blues Brothers.
- Have an all-night Monty Python film festival.
- Play croquet.
- Go people-watching on the board walk.
- Take a hike.
- Call the 1-800 number on the jar of Nacho Squeeze Cheese.

Speaking of calling the 1-800 numbers on food items, I recently used my investigative reporter skills to discover just how the Hershey Chocolate company manages to put that little flag in every single Hershey's Kiss.

Well, I found out that Hershey's Kisses were first introduced in 1907. Before August 1921, when automated wrapping machines were introduced, Hershey's Kisses were individually hand-wrapped (what a crappy job to have!). At this time, the familiar Hershey's Kisses flag was added to the product.

(But how do they do it???)

Today's wrapping machines can wrap up to 1,300 Hershey's Kisses a minute. With plants in both Hershey, Pa., and Oakdale, Calif.,

Hershey Chocolate U.S.A. has the capacity to make up to 33 million Hershey's Kisses per day, or more than 12 billion a year.

Pretty cool, huh? Don't even tell me life is boring here

--I love it!

Don't worry, I'm not the only source of entertainment ideas in this town. Believe it or not, there are a couple of other people around here who know how to best utilize their resources to have fun.

(This is the part where the phone survey comes in.)

This week's question: "What is the most unusual thing you have done for fun since you enrolled at SSU?"

"Wrote a movie called Return of the Demon Baby."

-Mo
"Walked the whole length of the boardwalk up and back at 4 am."

-Andy Mitchell

"Went to a dinner party where everyone dressed up like Dr. Gary Harrington."

-Simon Drew
"Went to Bingo at the Lion's Club."

-Alex Varson
"Played rugby."

-Kristie Doolie
"Went train jumping."

Went without sleep for several days just for the heck of it.

If you've got the fever, I've got the cure

by Jim Hudson, staff writer

There have been several recent reports of the outbreak of a near epidemic on Salisbury State's campus. Symptoms have included, but are not limited to, dilated pupils, sweaty palms, irregular heartbeat, shortness of breath, dizziness and confusion.

If you have any of these symptoms you'd better sit down. You just might (gasp) have Spring Fever!

Yes, it's that time of year once again. The mercury is climbing, birds are singing and students are looking at each other with goo-goo eyes all around campus. Take a deep breath. Smell it? Not the bacon factory! Try again, that's right, love is in the air.

An informal poll found that reactions to Spring Fever vary widely. Responses ranged from "Love sticks to your face," uttered by a disgruntled professor to "Ooh baby, if you've got a missile, I've got a silo," said by an interesting and very entertaining young lady.

Are they in love? Could be, it's Spring.

Just why are we so vulnerable to love in the springtime? Students had many ideas on this subject, too, including one who quipped, "Come on up to my place and we'll find out."

Perhaps the most plausible explanation of why we all go crazy this time of year came from Heather Heimes, a senior elementary education major.

"It's definitely the weather factor," she said, "When the sun comes out and it gets nice students seek an alternative to sitting in class all day. They start socializing and getting to know one another better, and boom! One thing leads to another, and there you are."

Unfortunately spring flings can end up being more than just a good time. The bad news, as many of us know, is that new cases of STD's are reported every week on campus.

The good news is that many students seem to be heeding the safe sex warnings we see and hear everywhere.

The SSU Health Center offers a popular three for free program, allowing students to receive free condoms. A bin is located behind the Health Center at the back entrance of Holloway.

When asked if Spring Fever has increased the demand for condoms Brenda Hooks, Health Center Director, said, "The program is utilized very much all the time. However, demand does seem to be highest on the weekends." She also stated, "Demand was especially high just before Spring Break."

She was quick to praise the SSU community, saying that students are extremely bright and for the most part know the dangers of unprotected sex. She did say nevertheless that alcohol and drugs can cloud good judgment so students have to be especially careful if they mix these activities with sex.

The important thing to remember this spring is to be careful while you have fun and enjoy yourself. After all, spring comes but once a year!

"HEALTH NOTES"

by Joy Marowski and Linda Lombardi

DID YOU KNOW THAT....

- * over 30 million Americans suffer from eating disorders
- * people with eating disorders overestimate their body size by as much as 50%
- * victims may lose up to 25% of their original weight
- * women are not the only ones affected (1 in every 5 bulimics is male)
- * 2-3 years is the usual amount of time it takes for a person to recover and develop a new relationship with food.

The 3 main eating disorders we would like to talk about are anorexia nervosa, bulimia, and overeating.

Anorexia can lead to...

- dry skin & hair
- cold hands & feet
- general weakness
- digestive problems
- insomnia
- loss of periods

Bulimia can lead to...

- dehydration
- digestive disorders
- dental problems
- muscle weakness
- ulcers

Overeating

- shortness of breath
- high blood pressure
- joint problems

Eating disorders affect us physically, but they do not stop there. They can affect every aspect of one's life. Victims may suffer from...

- mood swings
- loss of concentration
- anxiety (caused by hormonal imbalances)
- sleeplessness
- inability to maintain a "balance"
- putting important things on the "back burner"
- perfectionism (feeling that they never measure up to their own

- withdrawing
- feeling the need to overindulge on exercising standards)

- knowing exactly what they've eaten or ignoring the subject of food completely
- putting the attention on other's eating habits
- denial that any of this is going on

They may feel...

* out of control

* like they are on an emotional rollercoaster

* that others are judging them based on their control of food

If you think you have a friend who may be in need of help, you might want to...

1) Discuss your concerns with a professional. (The Health Center or Center for Personal and Professional Development would be good places to start.)

2) Talk to your friend. (Be casual, and focus on your friend's health, not weight or appearance.)

- 3) Realize that you may be rejected. (Victims may be afraid to admit they're out of control. Don't take it personally. End your talk in a way that will allow you to come back to it at another time.)
- 4) Know your limits. (You can only do so much. The fact that you've gone this far shows that you care.)

American culture encourages us to base our self-worth on body weight and shape.

To help yourself maintain a healthy attitude and lifestyle:

- 1) Learn about good nutrition.
- 2) Discover your eating triggers, and learn to work around them.
- 3) Accept that setbacks are a part of progress. Feeling guilty only digs you in deeper. Look at them as opportunities to learn more about your eating habits, and focus on the big picture!

Variety Show showcases SSU student talent

by Jennifer Evans, staff writer

For almost three hours last Friday and Saturday evening, Holloway Hall Auditorium was one of the most exciting places to be in Salisbury. That's right, it was once again time for the fourth annual Variety Show.

Under the capable hands of Tony Broadbent, this year's cast and crew outdid themselves once again.

The M.C.'s of the evening were senior James "Storm" Bennet IV, junior Jen Gordy, sophomore Charles G. Janney, Jr., senior Heather "Heddie" Smith; William "Kid Black" Wells, a junior; and senior Amber Kristan Wright.

Not only was this group of students upbeat and energetic, they were also very funny. The crowd favorite appeared to be Bennet, who kept them laughing with his crazy antics such as his oh-so-sexy strip tease.

Something new to the show's format this year was the addition of the "Incredible One Night Band." This group of seven men and women kept the audience mood happy with their musical talent and versatility.

"The band was a great idea," said sophomore Matt McGinnis. "It was a great addition to keep things from dragging between acts," said sophomore Rebecca Younglove.

The show featured SSU students and faculty showing their talents in various forms of dancing, singing, and comedy. There were 14 acts that made it through the tryouts and rehearsals, but the show had some definite standouts.

The show opened with the song "I Know Him So Well," from the play Chess, featured the pleasing vocal blend of Jennifer Carlson and Martha Pfeiffer, accompanied on piano by James Hatley, SSU Philosophy Professor.

Amber Wright, Will Wells and Shani Pritchett proved a crowd favorite as the hip-hop dance group "TROU-N-BLE."

The first act was closed by Vocalist Karla Wilkens, who brought the house down with her outstanding rendition of "Amazing Grace."

Act II began with the "Apologizers," Brad Barkett, J.J. Barkett and Gregger. These guys had no reason to apologize, except for maybe the wig, for what proved to be perhaps the most unique performance of the evening.

"I'm not sure what it was, maybe industrial/metal/thrash, but I liked it," said senior Melissa Fransen.

Guitarist Daniel Anthony also gave an incredible performance that simply amazed many of the audience members. "He has incredible talent," said senior Pamela Rosen.

"I had no idea we had such talent as our school," said senior Mike Baker.

The audience lapsed into silence as another solo vocalist, Tiffany Lowe, gave an inspiring performance of "Holy Ground."

Although no one knew what the name meant, Syncopated Cataclysm definitely was a stand out with the vocals of Joy Barnard, accompanied by Chris Matthews on bass guitar.

The best was saved for last, of course, as Simply Neisha and The Boys performed the song "Hero" and quickly received a standing ovation.

The three hours was definitely worth the wait to hear the smooth voice of Toneisha Jones and the great band performance of Mandel

Copeland, Martin Perry and Frank Johnson.

It seems that V4 was definitely a success this year. However, many people expressed anger over the rudeness of some of the people in attendance on Friday night. Perhaps having ushers to handle crowd control would be a welcome addition to next years performance.

Fun, sun and mosquitos: an adventure story

by Lauren Weis, staff writer

As I was leaving SSU on March 25, about to depart for ten days of camping in Southern Florida, one thought kept crossing my mind. "What did I forget? I know I forgot something!"

The first night, as itchy red bumps began to form on my arms and legs, I remembered. I forgot the bug spray.

We were camping in Clewiston, two hours north of Miami. It was me and 13 other Salisbury-ans, including the members of my Wilderness Preservation class, our teacher Joe Gilbert and Mike Boolukos, the Assistant Registrar and a veteran camper. He also served in a very important post, that of head chauffeur (i.e.-he drove the van).

We were on a mandatory class trip to study the Florida Everglades, a one of a kind ecosystem that is on the verge of collapse due largely to man's lack of foresight in development of the region.

So, you may ask, what were we doing in Clewiston, Florida, home of Sonny's Barbecue and stores that sell bumper stickers sporting the message "I'm a redneck and proud of it"? Well, we were staying at the Crooked Hook RV resort with a bunch of old people, good ol' boys and cats.

We chose this pleasant location due to the lack of campgrounds in the area, due primarily to the large number of sugar cane refineries present along the north edge of Lake

Okeechobee, a main water supply for the Everglades.

The sugar refineries pollute the waters of the lake which then run-off into the Everglades, damaging the already fragile ecosystem.

Our group spent a lot of time in a 14 seat SSU van driving back and forth around the Everglades region. At one point we took a three hour ride after having not showered for several days. I hope they give that van a good disinfecting.

We visited the Florida Seminole Reservation where we sighted a 14 foot alligator as well as an eight inch spider. From there we proceeded to Everglades National Park where we battled mosquitoes and canoed through mazes of mangrove swamps.

After canoeing all day the fourteen of us slept in four tents on a Chickee, a wooden platform suspended above the water, smaller than the average dorm room. In the Glades we saw alligators, many unusual species of rare birds, a wild bobcat, bugs, bugs and more bugs.

Once our canoeing adventure was complete we proceeded to Key Largo to swim, count our bug bites (I had 101) and snorkel in one of the world's remaining living coral reefs.

On our flight home I recall looking out of the window into the night sky at the landscape below. What most impressed me was the total lack of darkness on the ground below. As we flew over Miami it seemed that man was everywhere. We've lit the whole world with electricity, but with just cause?

The Everglades is our only subtropical wilderness. It is a place where one can go and truly experience darkness. It is place that reminds us that we are a part of the food chain (ask my mosquito bites).

We eat fish. Fish eat mosquitos. Mosquitos eat us. Deer flies eat us. No-see-ums eat us (yea they are really called no-see-ums, cause they are so small-like little gnats-that you can't see um until it's too late and they've already sucked your blood). Well, anyway, you get the idea.

Sure many of you will probably read this and think "I'd rather have gone to Daytona," but as for me, I'd pick mosquito bites over a great tan anyway.

SPORTS Men's Lacrosse destroys Greensboro Pride

by Mike Beardslee, staff writer

The Salisbury State men's lacrosse team improved their record to 9-0 for the season as they defeated the Pride of Greensboro College on Saturday, April 9, by a lopsided score of 18-7. Greensboro dropped to 5-5 with the loss.

Dod Poe came up big with two goals and four assists, while Dan Mergott chipped in with two goals and three assists. Erik Bayersdorfer of Greensboro scored three goals and recorded one assist. "We played well as a team," said Mergott. "The middies are really coming together as a unit."

SSU played the game without two of their biggest stars. Jason Coffman sat out with a shoulder injury and Ryan Murphy was unable to play due to a bad knee. Coffman is expected to be ready for action against St. Mary's on the 12th, while Murphy is not expected to return until the Nazareth matchup on Saturday, April 17th.

The Gulls jumped out to an early lead against Greensboro, netting two goals in the first two minutes of play. Greensboro scored just once in the first quarter, an unassisted shot that found its way past goalie Erik Miller to make it 2-1. That was the SSU scored 18 to keep their record perfect. (photo by Punga) only goal Miller allowed as he recorded five saves before being replaced by Russ Hewitt.

SSU shut down the Pride in the second period, and by halftime it was 11-1.

The wildest shot of the day came in the third period. Greensboro cleared the ball, and Rod Thomas noticed that Hewitt was out of the goal.

Radebaugh attacks the goal for Seagulls

by Joe Herman, Staff Writer

Although the Salisbury State University men's lacrosse team has dominated division III lacrosse over the last couple years, SSU still awaits the ultimate reward, a championship banner.

Over the off-season, SSU has acquired a number of players that have stepped in and made a immediate impact. Sean Radebaugh a junior from Glen Arm Maryland may be the missing link that SSU has been searching for.

In his first year at SSU, Radebaugh (otherwise known as Radar by his teammates) is the second leading scorer behind Jason Coffman with 21 goals, 28 assists and a total of 49 points with four games still remaining in the regular season.

Radebaugh, started out his lacrosse career with a full scholarship from University of Maryland, College Park after being named to the All-Metro team twice at Loyola high school.

Like many freshman, Radebaugh enjoyed his first year a little too much and lost his scholarship. Therefore, he took a year off and worked at his father's florist shop to save some money so he could go back to college.

After the year off, Radebaugh attended Essex Community College, where he scored nearly 100 points and led his team to the Junior College Championships.

Radebaugh was recruited by Towson State, but because of the Division I policy, he would have lost year of eligibility. But if he played division III lacrosse he would still have two years of eligibility remaining.

Radebaugh finally decided on SSU because of fellow teammate Dod Poe. "We played together in high school and kept in touch over the past couple years," said Radebaugh. "This is Dod's last year, hopefully we can get over the hump and win it all this year."

In Radebaugh's family, the sport of lacrosse runs deep. His father played lacrosse at University of Delaware, while his uncle won the lacrosse championship at College Park from 1973-75 and played on Team U.S.A. from 1978-82. Radebaugh also has a brother who is a junior defenseman at College Park and another brother who is a junior attackman at St. Pauls high school.

Although this is Radebaugh's first season at

He heaved up a shot from three quarters of the way down the field and scored to make it 14-3.

However, the game was well in hand at that point. The Greensboro rally fell short of threatening the Salisbury lead, and it was clear that the Pride was no match for the number two ranked Sea Gulls.

SSU did give up six goals

SSU, he says it has been a smooth transition. "Coach Berkman has helped out a lot. Everyone has been very pleasant, and the training room has kept me healthy."

When asked if there was one thing he would like to accomplish before leaving SSU, Radebaugh said he has only one goal besides a degree in business administration. "Along with the rest of the team, I just want to get a ring in the second half, and head coach Jim Berkman expressed some concern. "We're having a problem staying focused. We haven't had a close game in a while. It's been several weeks since Ohio Wesleyan."

Berkman did say he was pleased with the play of Tom McAuliffe on defense, and with the domination of Chris Murphy and Jeremy Michalski on face-offs. SSU held a 17-7 advantage in face-offs. They also scooped up 78 ground balls to Greensboro's 33.

The Sea Gulls are looking past St. Mary's to Nazareth, who they play away on Saturday. Nazareth is ranked first in Division III lacrosse.

"This is the Super Bowl of Division III," said senior midfielder Dod Poe.

"They're a carbon copy of us," said Berkman. "They're very deep, and they've got a lot of good athletes. They have probably the best man-up in Division III. We're going to have to play great defense, stay out of the box, and not allow any transition goals if we want to beat them."

this year."

With the addition of Radebaugh, opponents are no longer able to doubleteam just Jason Coffman. "Sean takes pressure off Jason and adds a dimension that we missed last year," said assistant coach Mike Gallagher. "He's a relentless player with lots of talent."

"Overall we are really starting to click as a team," said Radebaugh. "This is a great school. I'm really happy I came here."

Women's Lax ranked 7th

by Jen Mudd, staff writer

Salisbury State now features two nationally ranked lacrosse teams. The men's team, which has maintained a top ten Division III ranking for their entire season, is currently ranked second. The women's lacrosse team just received their first national ranking in several years.

On March 29th the

Brine/IWLCA Poll ranked the S.S.U. women's lacrosse team seventh in the nation in Division III.

"We're really excited that our team is doing so well and we are finally ranked," said attackman Renee Kretkowski.

The Gulls have compiled a 4-2 record under the direction of head coach Dawn Chamberlain, who is now in her seventh year. (continued on page 14)

Women's softball rounds into midseason form

by Joe Herman, staff writer

Although the Salisbury State women's softball team has a new coach, ten freshmen, and only three seniors, SSU currently has a respectable record of 5-3 for the season.

After Susan Muller left last season, Dr. Vienna searched for a new coach. He decided on Deanna Parks, who was in her first year as an assistant coach at Penn State after coaching at Kent State for four years. In only her first season with the Gulls, Parks hopes to instill a winning attitude that will soon make SSU a powerhouse in softball.

"I like the fact that she (Parks) is planning on staying at SSU to build the program," said senior co-captain Diane Racine. "She is the best thing that could happen to the softball program this year."

Unlike division I schools,

SSU softball doesn't have a fall season, so Parks wasn't really sure what to expect. "I was pleasantly surprised with the ability and talent of this team," said Parks. "We have a lot of natural talent; I just have to get them to realize that they can achieve anything if they work hard enough."

Parks has taught her players to become power hitters with emphasis on bat speed which has resulted in a .366 team batting average and a total of 20 extra base hits, including two homeruns.

"All of these girls have the ability to hit with power, but we will still implement a year round conditioning program after the season, with weight lifting," added Parks.

Ironically, four out of the five starters are from Parkside High School, which has dominated in softball for the past couple years.

These players include freshmen third baseman/catcher Becky Keller, pitcher Tracy Layfield, junior outfielder Laura Heath, and sophomore second baseman Nicole Urban.

Keller platoons at catcher and third base with sophomore Jen Bowman (Greensboro, MD). Keller is currently batting at .467, while leading the team with 14 hits and 11 RBIs. "She is an awesome power hitter," said Parks. "Softball comes natural for her."

Bowman, also a volleyball standout, is batting at .348 clip with a home run. "Jen loves the game and works hard all the time," added Parks.

In six games, pitcher Tracy Layfield is 4-2 with five complete games and a 3.80 ERA. "After winning for three years straight at Parkside, Tracy wasn't use to getting hit hard," said Parks. "However she has adjusted to the college level and has learned to keep the ball low and rely on her defense."

Rightfielder Laura Heath has also shown spurts of power with one homerun, two triples, and a double. "She has real good quickness and if she gets some more confidence she has the potential to become an excellent power hitter," said Parks.

Second baseman Nicole Urban leads the team with a .500 batting average with 13 hits in 26 at bats. "Nicole has had a solidifying effect on our infield," said Parks. "She's also very aggressive and adds consistent leadership to our team."

In their final season, seniors Shannon Cianelli, Sandie Warren, and Dianne Racine have provided experience and leadership that has made the transition from high school to college a smooth one for the younger players. "Although we're a young team we have really jelled together," said Racine.

Freshman shortstop Kara Burman and transfer first baseman Michelle Brosius round out the infield. "Michelle has a great work ethic and Burman is simply a true infielder with soft hands and the potential to be a superstar," added Parks.

Freshman pitcher Traci Coleman has also seen extended time with 26 innings pitched for an overall record of 1 and 3.

SSU still has close to twenty games remaining in the season. "I think we have the potential to win the rest of our games this year," said Parks. "This is a young but talented team; with hard work and dedication we could be a powerhouse in three years."

Men's Tennis defeats Goucher 8-1

Josh LeBaron, staff writer

Coming off a loss to Mary Washington on April 7, the Salisbury State University men's tennis team was looking to get back on the right foot when they took on Goucher on Saturday, April 9.

They did just that, defeating Goucher by a match score of 8-1.

The team improved their record to 7-3 with the win while Goucher dropped to 3-6 with the loss.

Brian Weist gave SSU a 7-5, 6-2 win at #1 singles, defeating Kevin Legdi.

In the longest match of the day, #2 singles player Mark Terrell lost to Cory Kalheim, giving Goucher their only victory.

At #3 singles, Michael Daw was victorious over Daryl Grady with a 6-1, 6-3 win. Matt Salisbury won 7-5, 6-2 at #4 singles. Bobby August beat Shuchaar Khein, 6-2, 6-4, and Ben Gibson beat Taylor Baines, 6-2, 6-0.

SSU had won the match before doubles even started, but they collected three more wins there.

The #1 doubles team of Weist and Daw beat legdi and Kalheim, 6-1, 5-7, 6-1 in a long battle. Terrell and Matt Salisbury were also victorious, beating Grady and Andres Visolav, 7-6, 6-4. And in #3 doubles, August and Tom Wolfe beat Kalheim and Baines, 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Head coach Dean Burroughs was happy with his team's performance. Burroughs said, "By winning this match it ensures us either a number one or two seed in the Capital Athletic Conference tournament."

The CAC tournament is where SSU will be this coming weekend. "We will be seeing Goucher in the tournament and they are a solid team," said coach Burroughs.

The Gulls played Haverford at home on the 11th, and face Catholic on the 14th.

"Hopefully these matches will prepare us for the tournament," said Burroughs.

Owens, who leads the team in scoring. However, they still managed to destroy Goucher College on Saturday, 22-4.

Candice Blanchette set a torrid pace with six goals while Tracy Bantel chipped in with three. Chrissy Fellona notched two goals and two assists. The Gulls will face Rowan on April 12th at 4 p.m. and Frostburg State on April 16th at 1 p.m.

IN DEFENSE OF THE WILD

"The naturalist Aldo Leopold said there are those who can live without wild things and those who cannot. I am one of those who cannot. I'm a product of the Pleistocene epoch... I do not want to live in a world without jaguars and great blue whales and redwoods and rain forests, because this is my geological era, this is my family, this is my context. I only have meaning in situ, in the age I live in, in the late Pleistocene. I do not want to be the cause of a transition into a new era."

traditional Christian view of sexuality and its proper role in a balanced, moral society. A clear statement of traditional Christian views will highlight how far modern American ideas about proper sexual conduct have changed in the last thirty years. Do society's new concepts about love and sex represent a liberation from oppressive regulations of the past, or do they simply lead to a life of strife and disappointment? The Newman Club invites anyone interested in these issues to Mrs. Ogburn's presentation and to discuss these issues following her speech. The lecture and discussion will take place Monday, April 18 from 8:30 to 10 pm in the Pocomoke Room (2nd floor) of the GUC.

Do you think

Here's your chance.

The World Game Workshop is much more than a lecture or even a game-- it is a unique event which uses props and media to bring information together to create an exciting and enlightening experience. It uses as a gameboard the biggest and most accurate map of the world; it uses pictures, music, history and statistics. Most importantly, the World Game Workshop allows you to use your knowledge and your ideas to do something you may never have tried: to actively decide the fate of the earth. The World Game Workshop was the brainchild of the American architect and philosopher Buckminster Fuller. He strongly believed, as the World Game Institute believes, that the individual can make a difference in the world.

ZTA

Zeta Tau Alpha

ZTA is hoping that everyone had a relaxing and fun spring break. We start off this article with birthday wishes going out to Jennifer Gregory on Apr. 5 and Jenn Vassel on Apr. 11. Next, a word or two to our fellow greeks. First off, we look forward to our four way social this Sat. with TKE Sig Tau and Phi Mu. A word of thanks to all of you who donated your tighty-whities, your (rugby) balls and your bodies (temporarily) for the ZTA scavenger hunt. We appreciated the cleavage signatures too. Anyone interested in a copy of an ALL GREEK PHONE LIST should contact Sheryl-Lynne at 860-0739. ZTA looks forward to seeing all greeks in Caruthers on Apr. 13. Anyone wishing to get together after that should contact our social, Jean marie at 546-6383. This week's last word goes out to Lori. . Has anyone told you lately that you have nice "gams"? (she's keeping them firm for GREEK WEEK!!!)

to roll! Congratulations girls, but just wait - this is only the beginning. Congratulations also go out to our newest "Sister of the Week" - Christine Bindi. We'd like to thank her for getting us out there doing "Habitat for Humanity" again last weekend (and for keeping us under close watch in her "Leroy" overalls - HA HA!).

Also SSU, be on the lookout for any AST sister in order to buy a raffle ticket. They are $1 each and we will keep you posted as to what and when you win once the raffle begins. You only have a few weeks though, so buy one as soon as you can!

And last, but most important, our nationals came down for a visit last weekend. Adele Black, our district president, is an alumnae from our chapter! It was great to have her down and she was able to meet all of our new initiates and pledges - we hope to see her again soon. Thanks to Tracie Kreiner for all the hard work in getting that whole weekend together.

Hey kids! Hope everyone had a happy brain-killing break. Congratulations to Sig Tau's championship intramural champions - All Grandmama. Redundant? Mark and Matt, Jim, Geoffrey-Ho, Steve, Mike and Josh. Do it again next year. Thanks for everyone's support. Llama-cide of the week goes to Chachi and Jim. You'll get 'em next time. And Johnny Law might get us next time. Also, everyone stay away from Jason and Cars: Bad Luck. The sledges are almost halfway there, but they still don't know how to tackle. Quote of the week comes from honorary brother Mr. Miyagi: "Always look eye." Brad says, "Always look hoof."

ΑΣΤ

Alpha Sigma Tau

Look out SSU! AST has eight new pledges who were pinned last Thursday and they are ready

And on a final note, something we should all remember for the spring semester: "What a Wonderful Day, Beautiful Sun, Beautiful Women, And the air is just right for Drinking."

ΣΑΕ

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Did you see him? Paddy Murphy was seen in Key West! As many wre galavanting around on the infamous Spring Break '94, it was reported to the SAE headquarters that Paddy was soaking up rays and making invitations with Jimmy Buffet while drinking boat drinks in that one particular harbor. Be ready SSU, for the invites are coming soon!

On the Spring Break tip, we sincerely hope that all had a relaxing break and the thought of safety was on everyone's mind (or at least they were wishing it the next morning!).

Attention all GREEKS!!! The Terrapin Clothespin will be coming right around Greek Week, so make sure you begin to save some duckets so YOU can buy some new greek accessories. From what our sources tell us, this place is top o' the line in greek goodies, so start saving NOW!

And for sports news; the SAE traveling softball squad has just returned from their Spring Trip and we are all geared up and ready to hit the intramural fields. So, if you are ready and now that it is warmer out, let's play (contact Chip at 548-9866)! Congratulations all SSU sports teams for bettering their records on their spring trip and a special thanks to SSU LAX coach Jim Berkman for once again inviting us to help with the Coors light Triathlon. Until next time. . .
